Connecting the Eu and young people

Mariana Antunes

The European Union, founded in 1957 with the Treaty of Rome, has since then been an organ of political and economic union of - currently - twenty seven countries. In the 21st century, the institutions of the European Union are regarded by the majority of the youngsters living in it as having little to few direct influence on their daily lives - it's something remote, impenetrable and only accessible to adults. As european youngsters living in the suburb areas of Napoli, the idea of a supranational economic and political union which has an organized agenda regarding our participation in democratic life, supports our social and civic commitment, becomes more tangible through our participation in european funded projects focused on youth happening either locally or abroad. Although one of their main goal of implementation is to ensure that all young people have the necessary resources to take part in the society in which they live, usually the means of communication. The best way to make sure european toungesters feel the Eu insitution truly near and present is to allocate more funds to guarantee to all the youngsters an equal chance of participation to the European projects and the same access to the means of communication.
