

EU doesn't care about the planet

By Ingeborg and Ea

We claim that we live in a united EU, where we focus on the environment and being a green union, but in reality it's all just one big lie to get voters.

Many recent studies have shown that the Danish population flies more than ever despite it being shown to be the fastest way to burn the planet.

Flying contributes to emission of greenhouse gasses like carbon dioxide which contributes to air pollution and noise pollution. Additionally, aircraft require a lot of energy and resources to operate.

Of Course, we as users have an obligation to make environmentally friendly choices, but we believe that the biggest responsibility lies on the government to regulate and legislate to make it easier for us. But they don't care.

Today it's twice as expensive to take the train than to fly from Copenhagen to Berlin, even though flying on average emits 5-6 times more CO₂.

Despite the EU being well aware of the situation, recent leaked documents have shown that green travel is nowhere to be seen on their political agenda.
