

Article title: Environmental Protection Issues and Actions through the Eyes of a Young Individual

By: Rafael Andreou

Environmental protection is one of the most important issues of the modern world. Humanity has caused significant changes in the natural environment, affecting biodiversity, the health of the planet and the quality of life of people. For this reason, protecting the environment is necessary to ensure the sustainability of the planet.

In general, protecting the environment is a collective responsibility that requires action from each and every one of us, from governments, businesses and the international community. While there are many actions we can take to protect the environment, the most important factor is the commitment and determination to change our behaviour and take immediate action. It is important to consider that every small action we take can have a big impact on the environment and the future of the planet.

In the next step, society in general must take the appropriate action, because there is no doubt that protecting the environment is everyone's business. And if awareness and information on such issues does not start with the young citizens of this world, then where will it start?

Education and public awareness are two important aspects in achieving progress in the field of environmental protection. Educating the public about the problems facing the environment and the solutions that exist can lead to changes in people's behaviour and practices.

Education has an important role to play in this, as it is through education that environmental education could benefit from being given the place it deserves in schools. Frequent briefings by both teachers and environmental organisations, active participation of pupils in programmes on environmental protection, and even the introduction of a special course on the issue, but one that is treated consistently and seriously, are just some of the activities that we could propose for the field of education that concern the environment.

The environment is sounding the alarm bell and we must keep our ears open to listen to it. Perhaps it is not yet too late, perhaps we still have time to do something, each from our own position, as much as we can, so that we can correct any mistakes we have made so far before they turn against us and destroy not only the environment but of course ourselves.

So all of us together, collectively governments, international organizations, environmental organizations and each of us individually should roll up our sleeves and start the change that will bring about the protection of our environment. Through proper information in all directions and through proper and regular actions, we can bring the result we want and ought to bring in order to protect our environment.
