

Article Title: Why does reading books is Important!

By: Petros Pirolis

As a 13-year-old teenager, I never understood people who actually read books outside of school. I thought those people must be crazy, and I always wondered how those people found it entertaining. Well, everything changed this summer after one of my uncles gave me a fantasy book and told me to read a few pages and if I didn't like it, I could burn it (he was speaking metaphorically though).

Guess what?

I read this book - which was quite large, to be honest, at over 400 pages - in a week. You may be wondering what made me change my mind so quickly. Well, it is simple, unless you try to read a book, you cannot say that it is boring and not entertaining. As a young reader then I will try to share some suggestions on how to begin reading books:

- Find a book that matches your interests. If you are into fantasy and epic worlds such as Harry Potter or The Lord of the Rings, then the choice is really easy for you. You can start with these or similar events. Just visit a bookshop and you will find tons of books. It is really important to start with something you are really interested in in order to build up a good relationship with books and then move on to more complex books and different subjects.
- Start with smaller books. I know, I know, I used to be afraid of them too, even school books. Large books are quite overwhelming, so starting with books up to 150 pages is a good way to start your bookish journey.

- 10-page per day rule. This habit has kept me on track to read books consistently. No matter what, I try to read at least 10 days a day, which works out to 300 pages a month.

Books may not be for everyone, but I am sure you can give them a try. The world of books goes beyond films and TV series, and it sparks your imagination and lets you create your own worlds.
